From The Pastor

From ADOREMUS BULLETIN – Page 6 from an article about the blessing of a new church:

At the promulgation of the Rite for the Dedication of a Church and Altar in 1977, then Prefect for Sacred Congregation for the Sacraments of Divine Worship, Cardinal James R. Knox, noted that the rite “should be considered among the most solemn liturgical actions. For the place where the Christian community is gathered to hear the Word of God, to offer prayers of intercession and praise to God, and above all to celebrate the sacred mysteries and where the Most Holy Sacrament of the Eucharist is reserved is a special image of the Church, which is God’s temple built from living stones.” The rite itself goes on to teach that because the church is a visible building, it is sign both of the pilgrim Church on earth and an image of the Church dwelling in heaven. In this place, in a deliberate and profound way, heaven and earth are joined.

The dedication of a church is a momentous event in the life of a community. Because it is so significant and can be so powerful, this ritual is one that the Church has arranged with exceptional care. The rite is composed of simple yet evocative signs informed by the sacred texts that accompany them.

The ceremony begins outside the church with a procession led by the cross and including sacred relics that will be placed under the altar. Arriving at the church the procession halts because the doors are locked, the lights are out and the place is empty. The door is ceremonially opened and the keys are handed to the caretaker. The faithful enter two by two. The altar is bare waiting for the bishop to anoint it. Anointed and Christ have the same meaning. The altar now represents Christ. Incense is burned directly on the altar (obviously a marble altar).

Most Catholics never get to see a ceremony like this because it is done so seldom. But we can still pray in our own church aware of how awesome it is to be in the sacred presence of God.

Clergy Congress will be held in Manitowoc Monday thru Wednesday.
